British defence has been put together on the basis

[67 groups unrecoverable]

SIMPLE TACTICS[iv] of 1944, the Polish pocket handbook[iv] of 1945 and the book THE MONASTERY[iv] by F. MAJDALANY.

To SPRING[v]

In reply to No. 122[ii].

The material on tactics and organisation received from No. 1[vi] is to be sent by the next post. Considering that you have no specialists in No. 1's language, the purpose of delaying the material until the following post is incomprehensible to me. In future the despatch of such material is not to be [held up][vii].

No. 1148

26 February

DIOGEN[viii]

Footnotes: [i] ✓ KRUTIKOV: Senior Lieutenant Petr Nikolseovich KRUTIKOV, cipher clerk in the Soviet Military Mission and later in the Military Attache's office, in the UK 13 July 1944 - 19 July 1948 and 9 October 1948 - 27 February 1950.

[ii] Not available.

[iii] The following 2 messages are apparently a repeat of MOSCOW's No. 343 of 26 February 1947 (3/NBF/T2093).

[iv] "SIMPLE TACTICS", by Lt Col A KEARSEY, was published in ALDERSHOT (1st edition 1941, 3rd edition 1951). A Polish booklet, main heading "Preparing a Soldier for Combat: Observations based upon Combat Experience", was issued in the UK in 1945. "THE MONASTERY", published in 1945, describes the CASSINO battle.
